With over 130 books written and a ministry spanning more than 110 countries, Dr. Sumrall remains one of the great 20th-century ministers of the gospel. A young man was lying in bed with a casket on one side of him and an open Bible on the other when he had a divine encounter. A voice told him to make a choice, and the man replied that if preaching was the only way for him to live, then he would do it. After falling asleep, he woke up feeling perfectly well. Three weeks later, he began his ministry by traveling to various countries and writing books. Initially, Lester mainly preached in the southeastern United States but soon realized that his main purpose wasn't just to spread the gospel but also to keep himself from dying due to a serious illness. As time passed, God intervened in Lester's life again through a vision during a church service in Tennessee. The young preacher saw people from all over the world, dressed in their traditional attire and from diverse backgrounds. They were walking towards a cliff that led to an endless abyss of fire, desperately trying to resist the pressure pushing them forward. Lester could hear the cries of souls falling into hell as he listened with his spiritual ears. God spoke directly to him, saying, "You are accountable for those who are lost." Lester responded by denying responsibility, stating that he didn't know these people and had never visited their countries. However, God reminded him of Ezekiel 3:18, emphasizing that he would be held accountable for the souls of others. This vision profoundly changed Lester's heart, making him realize his mission to spread the gospel message globally. He traveled extensively as a missionary, even recognizing some of the faces from his vision. Dr. Lester Sumrall left behind a legacy after passing away in 1996, including ministries such as LeSEA Broadcasting and Global Feed The Hungry, which are still active today. His publications have played a significant role in reaching millions for Christ.
